Tonick Watering

Irrigation Innovation

Aquamonix acquires Tonick Watering

November 21st, 2017

About Tonick Watering

Formed in 1996 by Tony Ware to produce innovative control products for the irrigation sector, the company now designs and manufactures innovative decoders to provide superior performance and reliability with the majority of other brands, Tonick Watering is now widely recognized as an innovator and manufacturer of decoder technology for two wire irrigation systems and is used globally by major brands.

About Aquamonix

Formed in 2015 by a successful buy out of several business units formally owned by US based Pentair, including Emflux Magflo Meters, Greenspan Water Quality Sensors and the RainMan Central Control systems.

Nathan Van Den Borne, Aquamonix Founder, states.

“Aquamonix will focus on providing Water Measurement, Remote Monitoring, Cloud Based Data and Irrigation Automation Solutions to our existing customers as well as renewed investment in new and emerging technologies.”

The acquisition of Tonick Watering Ltd will add a global presence to the Aquamonix business, and the increased investment and support will improve and enhance the range of Tonick control solutions.

Aquamonix will continue to manufacture the Tonick Watering product range in Europe and has plans to build a second production facility in Australia to increase the manufacturing capability and product range in the very near future.
